Henry Brothers is leading the way in staff training through the use of a new Construction Industry Training Board (CITB) mobile training unit.

The new, state-of-the-art unit visited the company's Magherafelt head office site for the first time last week.

The unit aims to help facilitate construction training, education and careers promotion for the Northern Ireland construction industry.

It provides short duration training in a variety of subjects, meaning minimum disruption to work whilst also helping employers train their staff.

Barry Neilson, CITB NI Chief Executive said, "Our brand-new mobile training unit will help expand our training facility to local construction companies across Northern Ireland. We fully appreciate that time away from construction sites for training is time away from the job. Bringing the fully functional training unit to the site helps alleviate this, as well as encouraging the industry to train and be fully competent in all aspects of health and safety.

"Henry Brothers in Magherafelt are the first of our registered employers to use the unit on their premises."

David Henry, Managing

Director of Henry Brothers added: "Given Henry Brothers' commitment to upskilling our workforce we are delighted to host the very first session of training to be delivered by CITB NI's new unit.

"This facility will enable us to meet our core strategy of investing in people development. The training delivered by the CITB NI professionals on board the unit enables our employees to participate in essential training on site and is a fantastic resource".
