APPOINTMENTS

Isabel McKernan has been appointed heritage project manager with Construction Industry Training Board (CITB) NI. The project will deliver heritage training and upskilling opportunities and engage with schools to raise the profile of a career in heritage. She is an architecture graduate from Queen's University and has an MSc in building surveying from Northumbria University. She previously worked with Ulster Architectural Heritage.

Decom Engineering in Cookstown, which provides cutting saws and coating removal solutions to the oil and gas industry and support energy companies engaged in the decommissioning of redundant infrastructure, has appointed Andy Clucas as general manager. A decommissioning sector veteran, he was previously on the leadership team of Decom North Sea and prior to this he held senior positions advising on decommissioning with the Oil & Gas Technology Centre, BG Group and Aker Solutions.

In another appointment at Decom, customer relationship management expert Geoff Clarke becomes business development partner to help bolster the firm's growing reputation and to increase market awareness. He has more than 30 years board, senior management and consultancy experience in sales, marketing and product development and has extensive experience in the energy sector.
