Firm adopts Portaferry school

St Columba's College, Portaferry pupils Jack Dorrian, Lewis Ritchie, Jayne Birch, Dorothy Atcheson, Niall Savage, with PK Murphy Construction staff, Brian Logan, operations manager, and Bryan Marks, foreman.

ST Columba's College, in Portaferry, is taking part in a new 'Adopt a School' scheme organised by the Construction Industry Training Board (CITB) Northern Ireland.

The school has been adopted by the building firm, PK Murphy (PKM) Construction with the intention of explaining to students the advantages of working in the construction industry. The scheme is designed to build a relationship with a school in either the local or work area to promote careers in construction. PKM will support the school and its students, providing them with a direct link to the construction industry within the local area, including working experience and careers events.
